BOARD PROBES CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Shaver and Girard Instructed to Submit Statements to Senate Investigating Committee.

(By Associated Press.) Washington, Oct. 21.—Democratic campaign expenditures became the subject of inquiry today by the special Senate committee which put under way at Chicago last week an investigation into the collection and distribution of funds by the Republican and Independent national organizations.

Clem L. Shaver, chairman, and James W. Girard, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, were called as witnesses and were requested to give a full accounting from the inception of the campaign to as late a date as possible.

The committee also wants them to submit later for publication sworn statements as to the financial affairs of the committee under date of yesterday and of November 1.

Present expectations are the inquiry will scarcely be concluded before election day.

Mark Twain's Nevada Chapel To Be Saved

Reno, Nev.—The cabin in which Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens) lived for a time at Aurora, Nevada, is to be brought to Reno and placed in one of the parks. The cabin is situated on the property of George Wingfield, mining magnate, who is preparing to transfer title to it and its furnishings.

The abode is much as Mark Twain left it when he deserted the west for the east. The stove on which he cooked, though a trifle antiquated, is still in its place, and the wooden bunk on which the famous author reclined when he thought out some of his western tales is intact.

It was in this cabin that he wrote "Roughing It" and many other stories that carried the tang of Nevada.

Russia Eliminates Workers' Holidays

London.—Soviet Russia is becoming a little less each year, it is said, the paradise for the workingman that it started out to be. This is particularly so in the matter of working days, as shown by figures published by the Russian trade delegation.

The workers of Russia now labor 260 days out of the year while in 1921 they were compelled to work only 221 to be law abiding citizens. Last year the holidays recognized by the government and Sundays gave the workers 105 days of leisure, which is 39 less than they had in 1921.

In 1923 the working hours for each man were 1,948, an average of less than eight hours a working day. Under the czar the working hours averaged about 2,100 a year.

3 RUM-RUNNERS CAUGHT ON COAST

Cape May, N. J., Oct. 21.—Captain Charles Wright, of Hereford inlet coast guard station, captured three rum-running vessels off the Cape May Sand Company's plant on Delaware bay, three miles west of this city, yesterday morning.

The boats include a two-master schooner, a sloop and an open motor boat and it is said that the three vessels had over 2000 cases of liquor on board.

While Captain Wright was piloting the three captured ships from the Delaware bay one of the boats, a sloop, suddenly headed for the beach off Convention Hall pier.

Captain Wright ordered the crew to stop, but they failed to heed the warning until a shot was fired across the bow of the sloop as it was heading for the breakers. Coast guards here say that it was the intention of the crew to beach the boat and attempt to make shore through the breakers.

The shot brought a large crowd to the beach to watch the battle.

The boats were towed into the basin at Anglesea where more than twenty rum-running crafts are tied.

U. S. RED CROSS RECOUNTS WORK

Statement Is Issued Telling of Progress of Welfare Organization During Past Year.

Washington—More than 40,000 trained nurses are now enrolled in the nursing service of the American Red Cross, according to the organization's fiscal report for the year ended June 30, made public today. This corps of qualified nurses, the report added, forms a nursing reserve immediately available to the government in time of war, epidemic or disaster.

Expansion of the Red Cross program of supplying nurses to communities having no other public health agencies, the report said, has been carried forward during the year with the placing of more than 1,000 nurses in as many localities. In addition to this number, five nurses maintained by a fund bequeathed by Miss Jane A. Delano, wartime director of the Red Cross nursing service, are on duty in isolated sections of the country.

First aid work by the organization, the report continued, was expanded in an effort further to reduce the accidental deaths among workers in mines, factories and groups of people everywhere. More than 500,000 railroad employes have been given Red Cross first aid instruction in the last ten years, and "experience shows that the accident rate among industrial workers who have had this instruction is nearly 75 per cent less than among the untrained."

The number completing first aid courses last year was 10,000, or 4,000 more than the previous year, and demonstrations in first aid were given to approximately 146,000 people. The Red Cross life-saving corps now counts about 50,000 members, all of whom are well trained and able to rescue and revive a drowning person.

Interest in the course in home hygiene and care of the sick also has greatly increased. The course aims to teach preventive measures; how to keep well; simple nursing methods of caring for the sick in the home, and also to assist in reducing infant mortality by instruction in the care of infants and children.

Standard of Health This year the standard of health was raised in the home of 135,496 children who were given regular nutrition instruction in the schools. Thirteen thousand mothers attended nutrition classes, 35,500 home visits were made and consultations held on special dietary needs, and more than 1,100 schools were assisted in furnishing hot lunches at noon.

The "Fitness for Service" program of the Junior Red Cross links in closely with the health service, as every one of the 5,452,745 school children who hold a junior membership is being taught the importance of proper food and adequate exercises. The slogan "every child a swimmer" has been adopted, and swimming instruction is being carried out enthusiastically in schools everywhere.

Following its custom, the Red Cross will hold the annual roll call this year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, November 11-27.

Letters Reveal Method of Francis Josephs' Reign

Vienna.—Intimate details as to the methods of Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, in running the dual monarchy 35 years ago have been given by the publication in a local newspaper of a collection of letters and orders from the imperial hand. The autocratic ruler was not slow to see what he wanted done, and to give orders to that effect.

In 1888 Francis Joseph learned that Vienna planned to honor the German emperor with a torchlight procession. This did not please him. So from Budapest he telegraphed his prime minister as follows: "I learn from the papers that an agitation is afoot for a torchlight procession for the German emperor. As such a thing is entirely out of the question, it will be well to set one's face against it decisively at once; moreover to keep one's eyes open.—F. J."

The emperor evidently depended largely upon the newspapers of his realm for information, for in 1889 he read in Budapest of certain projected Slav activities in Vienna in which Slav parliamentarians were to participate. Beginning his telegram "I see in the papers," he said to his minister, "I leave it to you to reflect whether, in view of the diverse provocative occurrences of the last few days, this celebration could not be prohibited, provided it is legally practicable.—F. J."

Polish students in Lemberg in 1889 adopted some resolutions, possibly reflecting hopes for ultimate independence, which the emperor did not like. He must have been reading the newspapers again, for his message shows he was awaiting confirmation from the governor of the province. In the meantime he telegraphed his premier: "Decisive steps appear necessary against the students who, in disregard of their rector's prohibition, met and adopted impertinent resolutions. Unless we are prepared to witness like excesses at all our universities, the government must exhibit determination.—F. J."

Francis Joseph made known his royal intentions to Hungary as well as to Austria, for he sent this message to Hedd von Bitto, the prime minister at Budapest: "Having learnt that the civil marriage bill has been placed on the order of the day, I once more draw your attention to the fact that I shall not approve a bill which is untimely and so destined to lead to perfectly unnecessary complications.—F. J."

TO LINK MOSCOW PEKING BY AIR

Representatives of Junkers Complete Survey to Give Regular Airplane Service.

Urga, Mongolia.—Representatives of the German Junkers Company have just completed an air survey to give regular airplane service between Moscow and Peking, with a possibility of extending it ultimately into South China. The line will follow the Trans-Siberian Railway from Moscow as far as Verkhne-Udinsk, and from there will turn south to Urga, and then to Peking by way of Kalgan and the railway connecting southern Mongolia with the Chinese capital.

The Moscow government has approved the route, and it is the desire of the promoters to get American capital to back a joint German-Russian company. There is no likelihood that the regular service will be established before next year at the earliest.

An air service is now operating with more or less regularity between Moscow and Vladivostok, and the proposed Peking line would operate in connection with this service, transferring passengers at Verkhne-Udinsk who desire to go to Mongolia or Chinese cities.

Since Mongolia declared itself an independent republic last July and proclaimed the Churudlan, or assembly, the holder of the supreme power of the land, there is much speculation as to what the future of the great plain country will be. Under the Living Buddha, who is now dead, it was presumed an autonomous country under the protection of China, but the Russian czarist government had Mongolia as a sphere of influence and resisted the efforts of Americans and other foreigners to get concessions to build railways here.

SOCIAL SESSION OF CHURCH BODY

Dr. Frank Kramer, Gettysburg College Faculty, Delivers Principal Address of Evening.

Between thirty and forty persons, Sunday School officers, teachers and members of the school, attended the covered luncheon held in conjunction with the regular monthly meeting of the official board of St. James Lutheran Sunday School Monday evening in the social room of the church.

After the luncheon, Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor, presided for George P. Black, superintendent of the school. The main feature of the evening was an address on Sunday School work by Dr. Frank Kramer, head of the department of education at Gettysburg College.

In his talk Doctor Kramer pointed out that the average Sunday School is one hundred years behind the public schools and yet the Sunday School, thinking itself superior to the day schools, will not take constructive criticism from the latter. Some of the things which the public schools made essential a century ago, but which the Sunday School of today does not have, are trained teachers, a curriculum, text books, sufficient time for lesson periods, home work, grading and supervision. Of course, this does not apply to every Sunday School for some have advanced methods of study Doctor Kramer added, but they are in the minority, by far.

Movement Explains At the close of the address, Rev. Bowman told the assemblage that Doctor Kramer had offered his time and services free of charge to give a course in pedagogy and general Sunday School work one evening each week during the winter. A number of teachers enrolled in the class. The first meeting will be held next Tuesday, October 28, in the chapel of St. James Church, at 7:30 o'clock. The class is not limited to teachers in St. James, Sunday School instructors in all the churches of the town having been invited.

This course will fit in well, Rev. Bowman said, with the Week-day Religious School which will open the first Tuesday in November. Trained teachers will have charge of this school, in which pupils from the first to and including the seventh grades in the public schools may enroll. Sessions of this school will last throughout the winter months.

The regular business session of the board then followed, in which were included the reading of the minutes and the secretary's report.

Paul Reaser was elected a delegate to the Young People's Sunday School Convention which will be held at Johnstown October 31 and November 1 and 2.

Numerous bills were ordered paid and it was agreed to pay for music ordered by the Sunday School orchestra. A committee for the proper distribution of song books in the school was appointed. The members are: C. C. Culp, chairman; J. O. G. Weaver, E. C. Moser, Curtis Klinefelter and Charles K. Hartzell.

A nominating committee, consisting of Lloyd Sharetts, chairman; J. Price Oyler, Mrs. Carrie Pretz, Misses Alma Sheeds and Margaret Williams, was also appointed.

The annual Father and Sons banquet and celebration will be held in November, the date to be decided later. A committee from the Sunday School to work in cooperation with a committee from the Men's Brotherhood to arrange for that affair was named. The members are Howard Sheffer, chairman; Norman Storrick, Luther Sachs, Howard Hartley and J. Frank Hartman, fathers, and J. Harold Mumper, Ralph Stoner, Frank Mumper, Jr., Allan Gise and Paul Reaser, sons.

The meeting was brought to a close by those in attendance repeating the Lord's prayer.

LODGE CLAIM TO PRETTIEST SPOT

Ippolitts, England.—This quiet old-world village atop a Hertfordshire hill is modestly putting forth its claim to being the prettiest place in England.

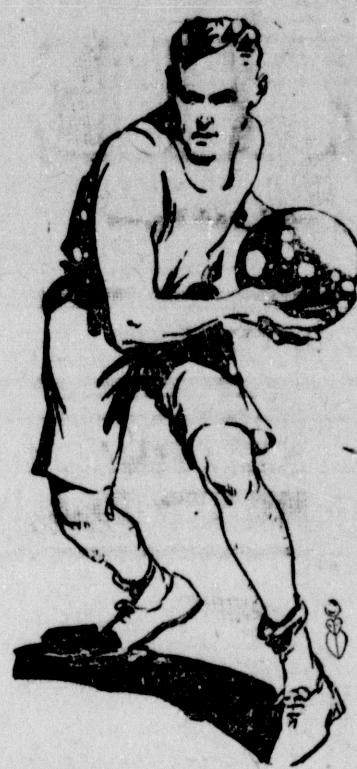

Whether the most pleasing village in England or not, the hamlet is at least interesting because of the quaintness of its name, which seems to be a derivative from the name of a saint, who, in his day, was as celebrated as a horse jockey as he was as a man of piety.

This was St. Oppolyts, to whom the beautiful old parish church with square tower and mullioned windows is dedicated. Of St. Oppolyts it is written that he "was a good tamer of colts, and as good a horse leach, and for these qualities, so devoutly honored after his death all passengers by that way on horseback thought themselves bound to bring their steeds into the church, even up to the high altar where the holy horseman was shrined."

And then her voice, crisp and steady, cut into his torture of consideration.

"Why did you deny him?"

He swung round again to face her, amazed, horror-stricken.

"You understood?" he gasped.

"I understood enough," said she. "This lingua franca is none so different from French." And again she asked—

"Why did you deny him?"

He paced across to her side and stood looking down at her.

"Do you ask why?"

"Indeed," she said bitterly, "there is scarce the need for hints. And yet can it be that your lust of vengeance is so insatiable that sooner than willingly forego an ounce of it you will lose your head?"

His face became grim again.

"Of course," he sneered, "it would be so that you'd interpret me."

"Nay, if I have asked it is because I doubt."

"Do you realize what it can mean to become the prey of Asad-ed-Din?"

She shuddered, and her glance fell from his, yet her voice was composed when she answered him—

"Is it so very much worse than becoming the prey of Oliver-Reis or Sakr-el-Bahr, or whatever they may call you?"

"If you say that it is all one to you there's an end to my opposing him," he answered coldly. "You may go to him. If I resisted him—like a fool, perhaps—it was for no sake of vengeance upon you. It was because the thought of it fills me with horror."

"Then it should fill you with horror of yourself no less," said she.

His answer startled her.

"Perhaps it does," he said scarcely above a murmur. "Perhaps it does."

She flashed him an upward glance and looked as if she would have spoken. But he went on, suddenly passionate, without giving her time to interrupt him.

"O God! It needed this to show me the villainess of the thing I have done. Asad has no such motives as had I. I wanted you that I might punish you. But he—O God!" he groaned, and for a moment put his face to his hands.

She rose slowly, a strange agitation stirring in her, her bosom galloping. But in his overwrought condition he failed to observe it. And then like a ray of hope to illumine his despair came the counsel that Fenzileh had given him, the barrier which she had said that Asad, being a devout Moslem, would never dare to violate.

"There is a way," he cried. "There is the way suggested by Fenzileh at the promptings of her malice."

An instant he hesitated, his eyes averted. Then he made his plunge.

"You must marry me."

It was almost as if he had struck her. She recoiled. Instantly suspicion awoke in her; swiftly it grew to a conviction that he had but sought to trick her by a pretended penitence.

"Marry you!" she echoed.

"Aye," he insisted.

And he set himself to explain to her how if she were his wife she must be sacred and inviolable to all good Moslems, that none could set a finger upon her without doing outrage to the Prophet's holy law, and that whoever might be so disposed Asad was not of those, since Asad was perforce devout.

"Thus only," he ended, "can I place you beyond his reach."

But she was still scornfully reluctant.

"It is too desperate a remedy even for so desperate an ill," said she, and thus drove him into a frenzy of impatience with her.

"You must, I say," he insisted almost angrily. "You must—or else consent to be borne this very night to Asad's harem—and not even as his wife, but as his slave. Oh, you must trust me for your own sake! You must!"

"Trust you?" she cried, and almost laughed in the intensity of her scorn. "Trust you! How can I trust one who is a renegade and worse?"

He controlled himself that he might reason with her, that by cold logic he might conquer her consent.

"You are very unmerciful," he said. "In judging me you leave out of all account the suffering through which I have gone and what yourself contributed to it. Knowing now how falsely I was accused and what other bitter wrongs I suffered, consider that I was one to whom the man and woman I most loved in all this world had proven false. I had lost faith in man and in God, and if I became a Moslem, a renegade, and a corsair, it was because there was no other gate by which I could escape the unutterable toll of the oar to which I had been chained." He looked at her sadly. "Can you find no excuse for me in all that?"

It moved her a little, for if she maintained a hostile attitude, at least she put aside her scorn.

"No wrongs," she told him, almost with sorrow in her voice, "could justify you in outraging chivalry, in dishonoring your manhood, in abusing your strength to persecute a woman. Whatever the causes that may have led to it, you have fallen too low, sir, to make it possible that I should trust you."

He bowed his head under the rebuke which already he had uttered in his own heart. It was just and most deserved, and since he recognized its justice he found it impossible to resent it.

"I know," he said. "But I am not asking you to trust me to my profit, but to your own. It is for your sake alone that I implore you to do this."

Upon a sudden inspiration he drew the heavy dagger from his girdle and proffered it, hilt foremost.

"If you need an earnest of my good faith," he said, "take this knife with which tonight you attempted to stab yourself. At the first sign that I am false to my trust use it as you will—upon me or upon yourself."

She pondered him in some surprise. Then slowly she put out her hand to take the weapon, as he bade her.

"Are you not afraid," she asked him, "that I shall use it now and so make an end?"

"I am trusting you," he said, "that in return you may trust me. Further, I am arming you against the worst. For if it comes to choice between death and Asad, I shall approve your choice of death. But let me add that it were foolish to choose death whilst yet there is a chance of life."

"What chance?" she asked, with a faint return of her old scorn.

"The chance of life with you?"

"No," he answered firmly. "If you will trust me I swear that I will seek to undo the evil I have done. Listen. At dawn my galleas sets out upon a raid. I will convey you secretly aboard and find a way to land you in some Christian country—Italy or France—whence you may make your way home again."

"But meanwhile," she reminded him, "I shall have become your wife."

He smiled wistfully.

"Do you still fear a trap? Can naught convince you of my sincerity? A Moslem marriage is not binding upon a Christian, and I shall account it no marriage. It will be no more than a pretense to shelter you until we are away."

"How can I trust your word in that?"

"How?" He paused, baffled; but only for a moment.

"You have the dagger," he answered gravely.

She stood considering, her eyes upon the weapon's vividly gleaming blade.

"And this marriage?" she asked.

"How is it to take place?"

He explained to her then that by the Moslem law all that was required was a declaration made before a kadi or his superior and in the presence of witnesses. He was still at his explanation when from below there came a sound of voices, the tramp of feet, and the flash of torches.

"Here is Asad returning in force," he cried, and his voice trembled. "Do you consent?"

"But the kadi?" she inquired, and by the question he knew that she was won to his way of saving her.

"I said the kadi or his superior. Asad himself shall be our priest, his followers our witnesses."

"And if he refuses? He will refuse!" she cried, clasping her hands before her in her excitement.

"I shall not ask him. I shall take him by surprise."

"It—it must anger him. He may avenge himself for what he must deem a trick."

"Aye," he answered, wild-eyed. "I have thought of that, too. But it is a risk we must run. If we do not prevail, then—"

"I have the dagger," she cried fearlessly.

"And for me there will be the rope or the sword," he answered. "Be calm! They come!"

But the steps that pattered up the stairs were Ali's. He flung upon the terrace in alarm.

"My lord, my lord! Asad-ed-Din is here in force. He has an armed following with him!"

"There is naught to fear," said Sakr-el-Bahr, with every show of calm. "All will be well."

Asad swept up the stairs and out upon that terrace to confront his rebellious lieutenant. After him came a dozen black-robed janissaries with scimitars along which the light of the torches rippled in little runnels as of blood.

$10,000,000 BET ON FALL ELECTION

Gambling Commissioners "Rake-off" Heavy Poll on Gamblers as Fall Election Approaches.

New York.—Betting on the result of the Presidential election has become a recognized and established institution in Wall street, and indications are that this year it will exceed all records.

Betting commissioners report that $2,000,000 already has been wagered on the result and that the total probably will reach $10,000,000 before election night. About 80 per cent of the bets placed in New York originate in the metropolitan area, the remainder being scattered throughout the country.

Inasmuch as members of the various stock and commodity exchanges are forbidden to place bets, the bulk of the "business is handled through three or four 'outside houses.' These firms do not wager their own money, but merely act as stakeholders and bring the bettors together, the charge for their services being 5 per cent of the winnings.

Legality In Doubt

So far as is known, the legality of the practice never has been questioned and no complaints have ever been registered against these firms. They require all clients to submit cash, certified checks or money orders with their bets except in last minute transactions with firms or individuals that are well known to them, when the business is usually done over the telephone.

When the bet has been placed, the commissioner gives the bettor a contract reading somewhat as follows:

"In the event that 'John Doe' is elected President of the United States we promise to pay you $4,000, less commissions."

This would represent the long end of a bet of $3,000 to $1,000. In the event that the bettor's candidate won, he would receive a check for $3,950, which would represent his original deposit of $3,000 and his winnings of $1,000, minus the 5 per cent commission of his winnings.

SALESMAN KILLED IN CROSSING CRASH

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 21.—Howard Little, 37, of Rahway, a salesman for the Standard Oil Company, was killed when his automobile was struck by a northbound Central Railroad of New Jersey train at the Bayway crossing of the Long Branch division yesterday.

Little's body and his car were carried 130 feet by the train, the engineer of which threw on the brakes when he saw the car on the tracks. Little was dead when the conductor reached him and the car was wrecked.

According to witnesses, the gates were not down when Little drove on to the crossing. The crossing tender, Frank Murphy, who is under arrest and was arraigned yesterday on a technical charge of manslaughter, according to the police, was in his flagman's house when the collision occurred. Murphy told police that an automatic warning bell was ringing and said that Little's car stalled on the middle track. Witnesses denied both of Murphy's statements.

NO USERS FOR ROYAL CANES

London.—There is some speculation as to what Queen Alexandra will do with a collection of the late King Edward's walking canes, when she returns to Marlborough House. A large rack contains the favorite canes used by the king, which typify the story of the walking stick in the last century. He was rarely seen without one, and always brought back a few from his many visits abroad.

BUTLER SCORES POLICE OFFICIALS

Director of Philadelphia's Public Safety Warns Police of Failure to do "Duty."

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Striking out with a red-hot speech that seemed to score a bullseye in almost every sentence, General Smedley D. Butler, appearing more vigorous and healthier than ever, greeted the assembled police inspectors and district commanders upon his return to active duty at city hall on Monday.

Contrary to rumors and many whispered reports in city hall that the fighting marine general had agreed to "go easy" on the politicians and crooked dive keepers, the safety director strongly reaffirmed his pledges to "take the police out of politics," and to clean up all vice and gambling.

In nearly every sentence the director poured volley after volley of smashing hits at the "corrupt politicians" and warned the police that "Mayor Kendrick and the people of Philadelphia have showed clearly that they want the city a decent place to live in."

He also told the police that he is prepared to remain director of public safety for the rest of Mayor Kendrick's term, "unless God should call him away before."

The fiery spirit of the general was evident as he paced up and down before the assembled police officials, who had been led to believe he was a semi-invalid.

Roaring and pounding his first on his desk, the director looked anything but a sick man as he endeavored to drive home the salient points of his message. This message, which he said was a final warning to many, was based on the failure of lieutenants and sergeants to "carry on" while he was sick.

CHAIN CONVICTS FOR LONG HIKE

Wewoka, Okla., Oct. 21.—Equipped with a sixty-foot chain to which he proposes to handcuff law violators and march them sixteen miles to jail here, Judge G. C. Crump, of the ninth judicial district, planted to go late yesterday to Cromwell, Oklahoma's newest oil boom town, where, it is charged, vice and minor crime are rampant.

Judge Crump convened a brief court of inquiry here Monday as a prelude to his activities. Today he will convene a similar court there, and as evidence is found arrests will be made and the "chain gang" formed, he declared.

"I'm going to start marching them tomorrow," Judge Crump said.

Early in September Judge Crump, in cooperation with Sheriff J. A. Doyle, went to Cromwell with his chain and a number of alleged law violators made the trip on foot to Wewoka with a deputy sheriff at either end of the line.

Cromwell, which was recently incorporated, has a population of about 3000.

THE SPIRIT THAT IS AMERICA

Recently a Chicagoan met a New Yorker most prominent in the financial world, in Washington. They were there on business, not for sentimental reasons, but as they strolled along the avenue both remembered when they were on duty in the capital at a dollar a year, during the early period of the World War. Said one to the other:

"Ralph, the happiest days that I have enjoyed since I left college were when you and I were on duty here. I believe that you can say the same thing. I gave up my work; so did you, and we came here at a great financial sacrifice to ourselves. But we were content and we were happy because we were doing our bit. It is true that later we both got to France and to the front, but the best of our service seems to me to have been those days when we first reported for duty here in Washington."

Such is the spirit of America. These two leaders of their lines possibly in the nation today have scored many triumphs in the business and professional world, but none had impressed them so much as being able to come to the support of their country in its time of need. Men at the front rally around the colors where they can be of the most service. These two, too old for those duties of youth, too, rallied around the colors.

It might not be untimely to remark that on the recent Defense Day these two old officers went to the army post in their city and remained with the officers in charge there all day.

THE POOR SHOT

I'm what the hunters laugh to see,
I'm what the hunters joke a lot,
I think they coined a phrase for me,
I'm what they term a "rotten shot!"

For always when the partridge rises
There seems a mist before my eyes.

I love to see the dog at point,
I love a crisp October day,
I like the shack they call "the joint,"
At night I like to "hit the hay."

Perhaps I'm happiest of the lot
Because I am a "rotten shot!"

I call it hunting when I go
To tramp the woods with dog and gun,
And friends it is a joy to know;

But always when the day is done
I find it pleases me to say
The birds I shot at got away.

It is enough for me to be
Out there where life is free from shame;
To rest beneath a friendly tree
And come to peace while seeking game;

Sometimes I think 'twould spoil it all
If at my hand a bird should fall.

My faults are many but at last
When my career on earth is run
And I am judged for all that's past,
And blamed or praised for what I've done,
Perhaps it will not be forgot
That I was called "a rotten shot."

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hopes Other Women Will Benefit by Her Experience

Skowhegan, Me.—"I was sick most of the time and could not get around to do my work without being all tired out so I would have to lie down. One day when I was reading the paper I saw the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertisement and saw what it did for other women, so I thought I would try it. I have taken three bottles, and cannot begin to tell you what it has already done for me. I do all my work now and keep up the whole day long without lying down. I have no more headaches nor tired feelings. I hope every woman who takes the Vegetable Compound will get as much benefit out of it as I have."

—Mrs. PERCY W. RICHARDSON, R. F. D. No. 2, Skowhegan, Maine.

EIGHT INJURED IN TRAIN CRASH

Judge Thomas F. Bailey, of Huntingdon Among Those Injured; Cause Is Unknown.

Lewistown, Pa., Oct. 21.—At least eight persons were injured at noon yesterday when the Commercial Express, train No. 26, from St. Louis to New York on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was derailed at Longfellow, eight miles from here. First reports indicated no one was killed or seriously injured. The eight injured were brought to this place by the Eastern Express, which followed the Commercial. The other passengers on the Commercial Express, 153 in number, were transferred to the Eastern Express and proceeded east. The embankment where the derailment occurred is higher than the tracks, and several of the cars that were derailed lay on their sides against the embankment.

Those of the injured needing hospital attention were not taken from the train here, but were sent on to Harrisburg. One of these suffered a dislocated collarbone and another a crushed hand.

Among the injured was Judge Thomas F. Bailey, of Huntingdon. He was shaken up and bruised, but later was able to proceed to Altoona. The others hurt included A. J. Penrod, Swissvale, shoulder dislocated, and M. H. Newahl, Altoona, had several fractured ribs and severe bruises. Mr. Newahl and Mr. Penrod were put on a train and sent to Harrisburg.

LITTLESTOWN

Littlestown—On Thursday, October 23, Littlestown will have an unusual treat in the dramatic recital to be given by Miss Grace Sage, of New York City. Miss Sage will appear under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Redeemer's Reformed church. The recital will be given in the P. O. S. of A. hall at 8:00 o'clock. She is a reader and dramatic impersonator of rare ability and is one of the foremost artists. In all her programs there is a flash and sparkle of comedy which comes from her own delightful sense of humor and deep sympathy with her characters. Miss Sage's true insight into character gives to her audiences a remarkable vision of the meaning of the play as they watch her characters come and go in an imagined scene. Her program at Littlestown will be the comedy, "Peg O' My Heart," in three acts by Guy Hartley Manners. This is a sparkling comedy which everyone loves, after seeing it on the stage or hearing it portrayed by a dramatic reciter. Miss Sage will impersonate the following characters, in her arrangements of the play: Peg O' My Heart, Mrs. Chichester, her aunt; Ethel Chichester, her cousin; Claire Chichester, her cousin; Mr. Hawkes, the family lawyer; Jerry, a friend; Jarvis, the butler. Miss Sage will be assisted by local musical talent. Miss Pauline Ebaugh, pianist, will play two numbers, and a trio will be sung by Mrs. Luther D. Snyder and Miss Lydia Rebert, of this place, and Mrs. Roy D. Knouse, of Silver Run, Maryland.

Icelandic Poets Are Thrilled With Arrival of Around the World Fliers in Far North.

Hofn Hornafjord, Iceland.—When an Icelandic poet wrote a song to the tune of "Yankee Doodle," celebrating the arrival here of the American globe-encircling airmen on their long journey across the Atlantic, it was rather a special occasion for the Americans, and the American translation was adopted and sung by some of the sailors from the cruiser Raleigh, which lay off the fjord to "mother" the flight.

But it was nothing new for Hornafjord, where even children chant songs of their own composition, and the sagas of the old Norse vikings who, more than 1,000 years ago swept these northern seas, are handed down from generation to generation in the language in which they were originally sung, faithful to the old texts. For Iceland has a remarkably rich literature of its own, both written and oral, and poetry is especially adapted to the Icelandic tongue.

Old Customs Observed In Hofn Hornafjord, isolated from the rest of Iceland by impassable mountains and seas that are often too stormy to allow the passage of the small Icelandic passenger vessels, many of the old viking customs are still observed. These include the gathering of the family each evening during the long, almost sunless winter, when sagas are chanted and the heroic deeds of the old Norsemen recounted. No longer do the Icelanders live in turf huts, as did their ancestors, and Hornafjord has modern homes of galvanized iron and cement, but the family gathering is as important today as

DAVIS BAKING POWDER

EBERT BREAKS UP REICHSTAG

New Elections Forced in Germany by Party Conflict; Dawes Plan Is Again Big Issue.

Berlin, Oct. 21.—The Reichstag was dissolved by President Ebert last evening. After fitful efforts to construct a bourgeois bloc which would definitely control a safe majority in the Reichstag, Chancellor Marx appealed to President Ebert for a decree of dissolution and writs for new elections, which probably will be held December 7.

The refusal by the Democrats to participate in a Ministry reorganized only to include the Nationalists proved a deciding factor in the Chancellor's decision to abandon his negotiations, especially as his own Clerical party also was in open revolt against any pact which would drive the Socialists into opposition.

Dawes Report Still Issue

As was the case in the spring campaign, the Dawes report again will be the outstanding issue in the forthcoming elections, in that the Democrats and Clericals will demand the continuation of Germany's foreign policies along the lines enunciated by the retiring Cabinet, which were wholly dictated and shaped by the issues revolving around Germany's acceptance and fulfillment of the Dawes plan. In this both bourgeois parties have the active support of the Socialists.

Just what will be the slogan of Stresemann's People's party and the Hert-Von Tirpitz Nationalist party cannot be foreshadowed. It is plain from the progress of the interparty negotiations conducted by Chancellor Marx during the past six weeks that both Democrats and Clericals bitterly resent the double dealing with which they accuse the leaders of the People's party and which is said to consist of a secret promise to Hert that the Nationalists would be definitely received into the Government and given leading Cabinet posts as a reward for their partial support of the Dawes plan when it came up for final acceptance late in August.

Morality was made for man, not man for morality.

Overbearing austerity is always the companion of solitude.

A high heat resisting oil for your motor

THE finest motor oil that has ever come from the Atlantic refineries—an oil that'll withstand more battering in the bearings, more heat from the withering blasts in the combustion chambers, more grueling tests of every description than you ever thought possible! That's what the Atlantic dealer has to offer you to-day.

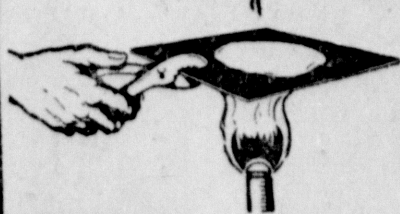

All due to the higher heat resistance—the greater body-holding capacity—imparted to this oil through the Atlantic process of refining.

Put this high-heat-resisting Atlantic in your crankcase and watch your motor perform. No "hissing" signs of power escaping past the pistons! Fewer clackety-clackety engine noises! A better oil in every way that makes for higher motor efficiency and lower operating costs!

Disclose Details Of Lusitania Disaster

Berlin.—Details hitherto unpublished concerning the inside facts leading up to the sinking of the Lusitania have been promised in a new book to be issued soon by Admiral von Tirpitz, the former navy head, who has been credited with having given the final order which resulted in the destruction of the steamer.

According to the announcements, Admiral von Tirpitz, now leader of the Nationalists in the Reichstag, has consented to the publication of all the secret archives in his possession, which cover some 20 years prior to 1914.

The first book of Admiral von Tirpitz appeared some years ago, and caused quite a stir despite its tone of reservation, but in the new volume the admiral, it is said, has promised to "tell it all."

Kellogg's Bran did more in two weeks than medicine taken in 20 years

Out of regard for your own health, read this letter:

Gentlemen: Your "Krumble Bran," used by me as a cereal, has done more for me in two weeks than the hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine I have taken in last twenty years for constipation. It is wonderful, and it is so simple.

Yours truly,
Arlington H. Casman,
Pachogue, N. Y.

Mr. Casman's experience has been duplicated in thousands of homes. Why does Kellogg's Bran succeed when drugs and pills fail? The answer is simple. Drugs have an unnatural effect upon the bowels. They irritate the intestines. The more they are used, the more one has to use. Finally, they have no effect at all.

Kellogg's Bran STIMULATES the intestines. It cleans, sweeps and purifies them. It acts exactly as nature acts. And it is never necessary to increase the amount eaten. If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran is guaranteed to bring permanent relief to the most chronic cases of constipation, or your grocer returns your money. For Kellogg's Bran is ALL Bran. Nothing but ALL Bran can be so effective. That is why doctors recommend Kellogg's.

The wonderful, nut-like flavor of Kellogg's Bran is exclusive. It is delicious—totally unlike ordinary bran. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream and in the recipes on every package. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Battle Creek. Sold by all grocers.

Explosion Occurs on Trenton at Target Practice Off Virginia Capes; Due to Flareback.

Explosion Occurs on Trenton at Target Practice Off Virginia Capes; Due to Flareback.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 21.—Four persons—an officer and three enlisted men—were killed and 18 others injured in an explosion late yesterday on the scout cruiser Trenton during target practice off the Virginia Capes.

The Trenton arrived at the naval base Monday and eight of the injured were placed aboard a tug and sent to the navy hospital at Portsmouth. Naval officials said the names of the dead and injured would be made public as soon as the ship's list could be checked and revised.

Brought Imbrie's Body Home

The explosion occurred in the forward twin gun mount and radio reports from the Trenton, earlier in the night, said it was caused by a flareback after one of the 6-inch guns had been fired. Three of the injured were blown overboard by the explosion, but were rescued.

The Trenton had gone to the drill grounds from the Washington Navy Yard after bringing home the body of Major Robert W. Imbrie, American Vice-Consul at Teheran, Persia, who was killed by a mob of religious fanatics.

E. C. Calibus in Command

The cruiser was said to have been but a few miles from Norfolk when the accident occurred. It is in command of Capt. E. C. Calibus and has been in commission about six months, being one of the first of the scout cruisers recently placed in service.

SOUTH CAROLINA
HIT BY "QUAKE"

Spartanburg, S. C., Oct. 21.—The Piedmont district of South Carolina was severely shaken yesterday by an earthquake. The tremors were felt in towns and cities in Spartanburg and Greenville counties.

Thousands were aroused by the disturbances, which occurred shortly after 3:30 a. m. and continued several minutes. Window panes rattled and pictures dropped from the walls.

The center of the quake was reported between Greenville and Pickens, where the disturbances were most violent, and strange rumblings were heard.

Residents at Pickens thought a terrific explosion had occurred and, terrified, ran from their houses.

Towns which reported disturbances included Anderson, Greer, Easley, Liberty and Union.

After a luncheon at a Paris hotel Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left for London.

Mrs. Fleischmann was granted a divorce in Paris on July 20 on the ground of abandonment. Mr. and Mrs. Fleischmann were married in 1920. Both had been married previously and divorced. Mrs. Fleischmann's former husband was Louis Hemingway, a silk manufacturer.

AGENT GENERAL WORKS 12 HOURS

Seymour Parker Gilbert Has Big Job on Hands and Labors Overtime to Accomplish Task.

Paris, Oct. 21.—Seymour Parker Gilbert, new agent general for reparations payments, yesterday broke all union hours on his first working day in Europe, being on the job not less than twelve hours. Five of these were spent with Owen D. Young, whom Mr. Gilbert is succeeding in the course of the next two weeks, and the rest of the day with Colonel James A. Logan, Jr., American observer with the reparations commission, getting acquainted with the situation.

Mr. Gilbert, who was married just before coming abroad, originally intended to spend a week honeymooning in southern France and Italy, but upon arriving in Paris he decided to give his immediate attention to pressing reparations affairs.

Mr. Gilbert's main office will be in Berlin, where Rufus Dawes, brother of Charles G. Dawes, is now in charge during the absence of Mr. Young. The new agent general will also maintain an office in Paris. Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Young will leave for Berlin Monday or Tuesday of next week.

The reparations official brought no staff from the United States except a private secretary. He said he had received no less than a thousand applications from Americans in Europe desirous of assisting him to distribute the millions which will be paid by Germany. It is his present intention, he said, to conduct the agent general's business with a minimum of personnel.

Colonel Logan will introduce Mr. Gilbert to members of the reparations commission today and will accompany him on a visit to the Astoria Hotel offices. An informal dinner will also

EXALTED RULER OF ELKS URGES EVERY ELK TO CAST VOTE

Columbus—Plans for the holding of the 1925 Elks' convention at Portland, Oregon, will be discussed there the latter part of this month when John G. Price, of Columbus, new grand exalted ruler, visits that city to complete arrangements for what he expects to be Elksdom's greatest.

Mr. Price will make many addresses on his Pacific tour. While the greater part of these will be devoted to fraternal discussions, he will also urge all members of the order to take an active part in the November election.

"We, as good citizens," he said, "owe it to ourselves and to our country to help direct affairs of our government by the use of the ballot. Every Elk should vote in November and use his influence to send all others to the polls."

Leaving here October 22, Mr. Price's itinerary includes stops at Terre Haute, St. Louis, Kansas City, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Ogden, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Livingston, Billings and Chicago, returning here November 18.
